The draft Preferential Procurement Regulations (?the draft regulations?) were published for public comment on 14 August 2009. The AIDS Law Project (ALP), a not-for-profit organisation that seeks to use and develop the law to defend and advance constitutionally protected rights, has a direct interest in the draft regulations. This arises out of ALP?s work on access to medicines ? an integral part of the right to have access to health care services ? and the manner in which the state procures antiretroviral (ARV) medicines. ALP has submitted a document with recommendations in respect to the specific draft regulations considered. To read the full submission
