Here you can find articles about health and HIV in Africa. You too can write articles by registering as a user. We particularly welcome articles about activism, health and HIV in your local community, as well as personal stories. Although the articles and their comments are moderated, they are not necessarily TAC-related articles nor are they necessarily written by TAC members. Opinions and facts expressed in these articles are not those of TAC.

Highlighting Mopani PTLP, Francinah Chauke

21 July, 2010 - 13:32 ? moderator

I would like you to know that Francinah is a remarkable woman. We owe her so many thanks for her unending support of so many of our staff. She is so confident and so competent that she has a really strong influence on all who come into contact with her. I believe she has saved many lives right here at Leeways, and we all thank her ? and the TAC for enabling her to do what she does so well ? from the bottom of our hearts.

Yes, I am married to another man and he is also a pastor and I know we can talk about culture and religion and debate scriptures. I can talk about it if you have time. I know that God has called me to be a minister and God has loves me and that is why I'm married and am in a monogamous relationship with another man and I thank God for that.

on transit for justice

- Discrimination

On the 6th of June 2006 almost three years ago I discovered that I was HIV positive. I was for the first time permanently lost for words, but at least I was finally at peace with why I was dismissed from DHL International a courier company based in Isando few months earlier due to an unknown illness, it was 'HIV' my CD4 count was less than 280 I was constantly sick I was coughing blood, losing weight, and fatigue was kicking in, I was emotionally and intellectually incapacitated, but unlike millions I had a chance to change my life and turn things around for better. I must admit it was difficult at first, but I knew the truth and I was in liberty to make right decisions especially a crucial decision to live and appreciate every second with humbleness and courage.

Mothers love

4 December, 2008 - 10:21 ? Kentse

- PMTCT case

I never gave up on me or my son even though he was nearly to death i fought until he got a proper treatment.

My son was diagnosed when he was 7 month not to say that I did take any medication I did I was on AZT I thought it could work but it never did and they also gave AZT syrup for six weeks but i guess it never worked.

I had a support group which gave hope love in everyway as i could not get that form home they were discrediting me about my HIV status they even questioned my having an affair knowing that I had Aids as they call it I never gave up not on me not on my son, He finally got treatment and got it too. I met a wonderful partner who undestands the situation even though when my family were fearing that i could infect him. as they think that HIV is a death sentence and that you cant have a normal relation after HIV.

And thank you ever so much for this Community chat it means a lot to me.

From the last few weeks South Africa has been experiencing a nation wide shortage of government condoms which may result into high HIV infection during this festive season. As a result the Treatment Action Campaign (TAC) Khayelitsha and Medicins Sans Frontieres (MSF) managed to get so 1 million male condoms from the MSF donor.
